

ALGERIAN

THIS FONT IS CERTAINLY EYE POPPING TO ME. IT'S A READABLE FONT WITH A VERY ARTISTIC STYLE TO THEM WHICH KEEPS THIS FONT IMPRACTICAL, BUT ALSO VERY USABLE. WHAT'S SO INTERESTING ABOUT THIS FONT IS THE FACT THAT THERE ARE NO LOWERCASE LETTERS IN IT WHICH BY DEFAULT MEANS THAT THERE ARE NO DESCENDERS AS WELL. BECAUSE OF THIS, THE FONT APPEARS MUCH LARGER THAN OTHER 12-POINT FONTS. EVERY LETTER FOLLOWS THE X-HEIGHT. IN ITALICS, THIS FONT JUST FEELS AWKWARD TO READ AND IN BOLD IT BECOMES A BIT OVERWHELMING. IF I WERE TO USE ANY FONT TO TRY TO CATCH SOMEONE'S ATTENTION, IT WOULD BE THIS ONE IN BOLD.

Bauhaus 93

This font captures my attention from its sheer bulkiness. Every letter seems to be readable, but it could be easy to mistake a lowercase s for a lowercase r. In bold this font just becomes even bulkier than before which reduces the size of the counters in some letters making some indistinguishable from others. In italics however, this font becomes very interesting as it is suddenly much more readable. The default s gives off an italic feel so it fits right at home in italics. That doesn't stop it from bothering.

Chiller

This font captures the essence of a horror movie. Even though this is being written with a 12-point font, it's still very small. The bottom of each letter is relatively hard to read so this font remains very impractical as well as a little unusable. When converted to bold however, the font breathes new life for itself making it significantly more legible. WHEN LETTERS ARE CAPITALIZED, I ACTUALLY BEGIN TO FEEL UNEASY BASED OFF THEIR APPEARANCE AND WHEN IN BOLD, EVEN MORE SO. Every lowercase letter that does not contain an ascender, descender, or a tittle is just a tiny bit smaller than the x-height. This font also looks much creepier in italics.
