MANIC MINER

A B C D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z ! ¢ $

The font Manic Miner is a fun font that would, out of the list of classes of fonts that we went over, it would maybe fit best in the Decorative category, or maybe the Slab category, but it may be in a completely other category. Regarding each letter, it seems like vowels and capital letters, either vowel or consonant, are at the baseline while lowercase consonants go just a little bit above the base line, just to add artistic effect to the font. Other notes about the font; the only letter in this font to have a serif is “T”, and also, the letters stay the same whether they are lowercase or capitalized, only becoming slightly larger. Along with that, numbers do not appear in this font, and the exclamation point and question mark are a sword and an ostrich. This playful, fun font seems like a font that would be used in an 8-bit video game like the old Mario or Zelda Games, or even video games that use pixels or cubes to make the layout of the game, like Minecraft. Other appearances for this font could be in cartoons or maybe even in comic book titles.

STONE WALLS

This font is interesting because it seems like a lot of letters have their own style to them, yet keep the same style/theme that the rest of the font’s letters have. It can pretty much be classified as a decorative font. The only letter that fully breaks the baseline of the rest of the letters is the bowl of the descender of the J; other letters have little serifs or ears peeking out from the bottom of the baseline, like the N and the R. Other letters like K, S, and Z have their own style to them. Also, caps and lowercase are the same font style. The first thing I thought when seeing this font was the title for a Batman comic; it gives off a hero vibe, with a mix of fun and playfulness regarding the letters K, S, and Z. It seems like it would be used for the title or heading of something heroic. It can also be used for titles for video games as well, and even movie titles or credits of movies.

TRASH TALK

This font mixes the style between lowercase and capitalized letters, but the same style appears whether you type it as caps or lowercase. It's a sketchy sort of font, with some parts of some letters going below the baseline, like the J, S, T, and Y. With this font, it seems like some letters would be ligatured together, but they aren't touching, just barely though. "Trash Talk" would most likely be classified as a decorative font, since it's a messy, sketchy type of font. Other features that I noticed with this font would be that the P's bowl isn't all the way closed like a normal P and that most of the letters look as though they're written then written over again in the same way, but just a little bit off. Letters that are like this would be the T, Y, X, and others. This font gives off a child's handwriting feel to it since it's so messy and uneven. It reminds me of titles or text in the "funnies" of the newspaper; the comics like the Peanuts and Calvin and Hobbes. It can easily be used as a child's hand writing for a cartoon or video game as well.
