Harlow Solid Italic

This font is a very elegant, it is very smooth flowing and catches your eye. It uses serif style of typeface & also has ligatures. The kerning is spaced very close together. The script style of this font would more than likely be seen on an invitation for a wedding or formal event because it gives the impression of what the event style is. This font could also be used for headlines since reading larger blocks of script can be difficult. Another place of use would be in early education when learning to write in cursive, to give the children an idea how to shape the letters.

Chiller

With this font the descenders and ascenders can rise above the point line. The set width of these letters is very uneven, along with the spacing between the letters. It can be hard to follow along with this font since a lot of the letters are either bunched up or spaced further away. This would not be a good font to try and read in quantities. Chiller could be used on a poster for a horror film due to the shaping of each letter giving off an eerie feeling. This could also be used in a comic book to set the mood of a specific event that is happening within. Another place where the font would be appropriate is Halloween decorations or attractions for it's reputation of loose strokes.

Georgia

This a more formal style of font without ligatures. As stated in the power point this is a modern style of font that you would see in many places. This could be used for a class assignment since it's very easy to read. Another place that would be acceptable would be in a magazine the modern styling of this font will fit in with the style of the item it is describing. I could also see this font on labels since it is very appealing to the eye.
